1. The Great Alliance of Chinese Democracy and Liberty was founded in March 1946 at Kunming. Its promoter was WANG Hui-sheng (汪惠生). He graduated from the Whampoa Military Academy in 1925, and, after graduation, took a position as an instructor in the Academy. During the war against Japan, he was the commander-in-chief of a certain army in Yunnan. He resigned two years before the victory. General MOU Ting-fang, commander of the 94 Army, was a classmate of WANG at the Academy.
2. More than 100,000 persons joined this party in Yunnan, Kweichow, and Szechuan provinces. Most of them are professors, school teachers, high school students, and other educated people.
3. This party is against the corruption of certain Kuomintang high authorities and the traitorous behavior of the Chinese Communist Party, but it favors the Three People's Principles and the general policy of the Kuomintang. As a result, the Chinese Communist Party is very much against this group. One of the executive commissioners in Yunnan Province was assassinated by the Communists. The Hsin Hua Jih Pao, a Communist newspaper, condemns the party at all times.
4. The Tientsin Branch Alliance of the party has asked for formal approval from the Tientsin Municipal Government, the Tientsin Kuomintang Office, the Tientsin Social Affairs Bureau, and the Tientsin Garrison Headquarters. None of these authorities has given approval because they fear that an opportunity would be given to Chinese Communists to penetrate into Tientsin by joining this party. More than 3,000 persons, most of them school staff members, teachers, and merchants, have wanted to join this branch alliance. However, since approval from the authorities has not been granted, which means that there will be no protection from the authorities, this branch alliance has not begun to function.
5. The organization of the Tientsin Branch Alliance is as follows:
 - a. The Chief Commissioner (主任委員)
 - b. Eleven Executive Commissioners (執行委員), six to eight Supervisory Commissioners (監察委員). (Out of these seventeen to nineteen commissioners, seven will be designated as permanent commissioners.)
